Demographic evolution

• The social and territorial transformation which has been taking place in the Veneto in recent decades can be clearly seen in its demographic evolution: the population continued to increase, reaching 4.9 million at the end of 2008.

Immigration in Veneto Region

• Due to the impressive economic growth of the last two decades, Veneto has turned into a land of immigration and has been attracting more and more immigrants since the 1990s.

• The increase in population is still partly due to the settlement of various immigrant communities, which together account at the end of 2008 was 460,000 residents. Including the seasonal and the irregular component (which is not included in official statistic) is estimated a presence of 500,000 immigrants in Veneto, 10% of residents.

Labour Market

• The region is therefore clearly attractive, also because of the high employment indexes which have always remained above national and European levels.

• But during 2009 started the crisis effect.
Employment and unemployment rate

• The trend of total employment has declined sharply (calculated around to 50,000 units). In the first nine months of 2009 the continued decline in direct employment has been combined with the self-employment.

• Even data on labour force dynamics particularly confirm strictly negative trend in industry and construction sector, while signals are different with respect to the tertiary sub-sectors: the tourism sector, thanks to the good bathing season, is reported even growth.
The unemployment rate of 3.5% on average in 2008, rose 5% in the first months of 2009.
The employment rate on the 15-64 age group, which in 2008 had exceeded 66% in 2009 and flow below 65%.
Ageing Population

• The situation of Veneto Region concerning the occupation of elder people is one of the worst in Europe, following the Italian trend. 28.8% of elder people are now working.

• One innovative action in our Region is: TALENTAGED aimed at developing and testing a new integrated training methodology able to support “aged” workers, men and women, during the choices related to the labour market permanence and change;
Regional priorities

• On health care: health care services for ageing population and family link to health-social services and job market.

• On labour market: harness the full potential of human capital in times of great demographic changes (youth, mature workers, migrant workers)

• On innovation: to steer generational changes and succession processes in the era of globalization
